Description
Hi all,
I really love Audacious for being light weight and the vast amount of different formats it can handle. One big feature is still missing and is the reason why I keep using Clementine most of the time. And that feature is the selection field.
For those who know Clementine: it has a 'selection field' which looks like the address field/bar in an internet browser. When I type a text there, all music pieces with that text are visible (and will get played). Why is this a more than nice to have feature: I tend to place a '+' in the comment field of the ID3-tag when I like a piece more than the others. This way, I can play a selection of only these songs and omitting all the others.
Have a nice day. And compliments to all the software developers of Audacious.
