Target version:
Affects version:	4.1

Description
The player showed a popup to inform me that it's unabled to read the metadata of the file.
The files I downloaded are playable with Windows 10 audio player.
To reproduce the issue : download a song from https://www.mp3juices.cc/ (e.g. CKAY - LOVE NWANTINTI _ OFFICIAL AUDIO) and open it with Audacious.

NB : I can't play the files downloaded from mp3juicees.cc on my car MP3 player too. I guess I will use a YouTube converter it's a better alternative.

Do you have the same issues with MP3 files downloaded from a more mainstream service (Amazon or such)?

No. But I believe that a metadata error should not be an obstacle to read a file.

You can delete this issue if you don't agree.

Best Regards.

Okay, I changed the error message to align with your beliefs.

In a future version, it will say instead, "The file could not be decoded. It may be invalid, corrupt, or in an unsupported format."
