Description
Tracklist window should stay focused / on top z-index when you drag and drop a track into it. This is, for example, default behavior on Winamp on Windows, but doesn't happen on Audacious on Ubuntu. I think it is extremely handy to happen. Current behavior is, when you drag the track from a (nautilus?) window, it gets focused and it overlaps and hides the tracklist window, making it necessary to put them in non-overlapping places.

It's a good idea, but not something we have control over. Your window manager decides which window gets placed on top, so you should file a feature request with its developers.
