Description

It's so great to have global shortcuts available from Global Hotkeys Plugin. I like to use Super + F1 to Super + F5 as shortcuts like this:

- Super + F1: Previous
- Super + F2: Play
- Super + F3: Pause/Resume
- Super + F4: Stop
- Super + F5: Next track

But I have to press Super + F5 twice to go to the next track. To reproduce:

1. Go to Plugins > Global Hotkey > Settings
2. Set Next track to Super + F5
3. Press Super + F5 once and see that nothing happens
4. Press Super + F5 quickly again, and the next track is played

If I set the shortcuts to something else like F1 for Previous track and Ctrl + F5 for Next track, it works fine. But those will conflict if I have a browser open, or another program, which is why I prefer Super + F1 to Super + F5, which haven't so far been used by another program.

Something else in your system is probably grabbing Super + F5. There is nothing special in our handling of that particular combination.

Not a bug.

You're right, something was probably hogging the Super key ... I tried to understand why with xev, but just resorted to use Shift + Ctrl in stead, which works fine in Ubuntu 18.04:

- Shift + Ctrl + F1: Previous
- Shift + Ctrl + F2: Play
- Shift + Ctrl + F3: Pause/Resume
- Shift + Ctrl + F4: Stop
- Shift + Ctrl + F5: Next track
