Description

It's not clear how to fix this. But in previous versions of Audacious it was possible to get a GTK2 Dark Theme. Now it's all white background with the new Audacious 4.0...

And no i do not want to use the 'Winamp Classic Interface'. Because that splits into many different windows.

You'll need to set a Qt 5 theme. Normally your Linux distribution and/or desktop environment should have done that for you already.

Thank you. Yeah I launched the QT5 Configuration Tool ('qt5ct') and under the 1st appearance tab changed the following settings:

Style: gtk2
Standard dialogs: GTK2
Pallete: Default

And hit apply. This was enough to set the QT5 theme so that it appears exactly as before in previous versions Audacious. Thank you again, may close this issue.
